2. [REDACTED] met with an officer of the [REDACTED] desk, [REDACTED] to discuss the kit of materials prepared for the station for utilization in liaison training. The request for these items was rather vague -- "something on Communism" -- so [REDACTED] prepared a rather extensive folder of basic readings from which [REDACTED] can select the most appropriate.

4. [REDACTED] have agreed to share a one day presentation to the Military Assistance group at Fort Bragg. [REDACTED] will discuss Soviet policies and programs in the Third World while [REDACTED] tackles some of the problems of US -- Third World relations. They will then conduct a concluding panel discussion and question period. This day is not configured as we would have preferred. The officer in charge continues to think in terms of the "threat" to the US in the Third World -- Counter Insurgency is still the emphasis -- so that [REDACTED] will have to perform a rather nice balancing act to work in the factors which appear to constitute a "challenge" rather than a "threat."
